Letter from the Editor

Dear Zamboni Reader,

CAUTION. Trigger warning. Content warning. All the warnings.

This isn't your mother's Zamboni. This issue is rated X.

Tufts alumni Thomas Hobbes and John Locke debated on the topic for years, striving to answer the question: are crude jokes actually funny? Hobbes's famous Leviathan was actually an X-Rated, satirical piece for The Zamboni until The Tufts Daily got to him and censored it. “Stanley Kubrick's A Clockwork Orange” (1971) is X-Rated and my FMS friends won't shut up about it. And everyone knows that William Sex, founding member of the Smashing Pumpkins and the creator of the Zamboni, made the first sex joke in the tumultuous 1980s.

Have you ever had sex, dear reader? Well, fortunately for you, if you're reading the Zamboni, it doesn't matter! We've got more than just the tips for you — we've also tricks, dicks (a cockword, if you will), and thorough coverage of the campus happenings. We know what you salacious, voracious readers so desperately desire. Our X-Rated issue is silly, bold, glamorous, and ridiculously cool. Because, people, let's face it, sex is brilliant. And so are you. And, as the Zamboni grows and grows, we have made a commitment to cover topics students actually care about: sex, drugs, and crossword puzzles.

Goofs and gaffs aside, this magazine reflects the hard work of a magnificent team of writers, copy editors, graphics peeps, layout designers, and so many more. We have put so much time and effort into the Zamboni, so thank you so much for taking the time to read our work! We love you and hope we can make you laugh, cry, and do a little jig. The Zamboni is written to spread joy to all, and that's all we want to achieve with our publication. I hope Ma is proud of me. Now, sit back and enjoy the show!

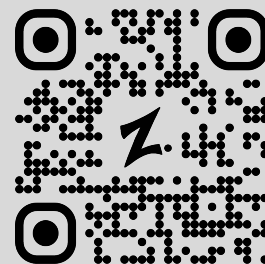

Ain't that a kick in the head?

New Tufts Financial Aid Program Just a Web-Link to Porn Auditions

By Sam Braithwaite

The Tufts University administration headed by the newly appointed President Sunil Kumar has made many promises to the student body. Today, they have delivered.

Circumventing the complicated and oftentimes laborious process of applying for financial aid, President Sunil Kumar has said goodbye to the irksome applications of old and introduced a simple and exciting solution with (doggy) style.

That's right: the new Financial Aid Program enables the student body to 'smash for cash'.

Students looking to reduce the cumbersome admissions fee now have the freedom to select from any porn company, from any audition slot, at their convenience. Never has avoiding the world of excess loans and financial forms been so pleasurable. A spokesperson from the President's office has revealed working tirelessly over the past months to find a solution that will fit just right for all students.

"Students will be able to make hundreds of dollars per session, as well as maybe shake off our school's reputation for being a bunch of bitchy prudes," the representative added. This special insight has revealed the duality of the new financial aid program. Not only does the administration hope to reduce costs for the student body, but also establish a generation of (as coined by President Kumar himself) "boner-fide intellectuals."

The future looks bright for new and current Tufts students. However, it's not just students getting spunky: Next week the Tufts' Administration publishes its plan to improve the income of dining workers (Here's a hint: prostitution).

Spring Fling Budget Cuts: Headliner Announced to Be My Cousin Who Goes to Northeastern and Plays a Mean Bass Guitar

By Jack Wilan

In a well-edited Instagram reel, TUSC finally announced Spring Fling 2024's headliner. The concert, thrown annually at Tufts since 1980, will this year be headlined by my cousin who goes to Northeastern and plays a mean bass guitar. His name's Tommy, he's half British, and he's played guitar since he was six (from what I can remember). These days he's principally on bass for his band "Leather Enema". Other members of the band include Manny on keyboard, Stu on Drums, and Trix on lead vocals/electric guitar. Though Stu's been real wishy-washy on coming to rehearsal recently and Tommy's a little worried he might drop out of the band soon. Worst comes to worst, his friend Melvin could sub in for him but Melvin's only been playing for like less than a year and he's really not that good. According to a TUSC representative, the band will be playing "mostly 90s alt-rock" as well as "some experimental shit Manny's been cooking up with his roommate." Leather Enema's sure to put on a banging show — cheap too! Tommy said he'd do it for some Pizza Days socks and a bag of Sourpatch watermelon.

A pack of Huskies, armed with a sick axe

Students were a little mixed on the announcement. "It's not really what I was hoping for," said sophomore David Van Ripper, "they could have at least gotten a band from BU."

Others were more hopeful. Junior Dominic Londolphin remarking that "their single that's available on Soundcloud's actually pretty well produced." He added, "at least he'll probably be on time, so long as the Green Line doesn't shut down."

Cowardly TCU Treasurer Cuts Funding for Media Clubs In Attempt to Suppress Dissent

By David Van Riper (and Zac Colah)

In what may become an act of political suicide, Tufts Community Union Treasurer Dhruv Sampat, announced that TCU would be cutting funding for on-campus publications, presumably in an effort to suppress dissent.

“Our new policy aims to pivot the Tufts media landscape to a digital format, which would ensure that no one reads the criticism of my boss,” his media staffer said.

The funding cut was announced in the wake of allegations of embezzlement against TCU senators.

The Zamboni investigative team was unable to confirm what the embezzled funds were used for, but neighbors reported a suspicious amount of cocaine and hookers coming and going from Sampat’s residence.

That son-of-a-bitch Sampat came to power last year after rigging the TCU election against David Van Riper, the true winner of the treasurer position. David is now forced to be the treasurer for the Zamboni, where he has access to a much smaller pool of money to embezzle. Worst of all, David enjoys none of the cocaine or hookers that he dreamed of when he applied to Tufts.

Increase in Tufts' Cocaine Production Attributed to New Government Funding, Department Overhaul

By Max Kantor-Gerber

This quarter saw an unprecedented 33% increase in Tufts University's production of the valuable and high-demand drug: cocaine.

While cocaine remains a federally classified Schedule II drug—possession of which can carry up to a fine of $2000 or two years in prison in the state of Massachusetts — a recently passed law allows, select private institutions to manufacture it.

The law was passed in response to the ever-tightening monopoly that South American countries, particularly Colombia, hold on the cocaine market. As the largest consumer of the drug in the world, the U.S. sees hundreds of tons of cocaine pour across its borders every year. The Biden Administration has announced “getting back into “the game” as an executive priority, first by putting its foot down on the extradition of high-profile drug traffickers, and now by investing in domestic collegiate cocaine production.

Tufts has been an active in cocaine manufacturer since 2021, when worldwide cocaine demand hit a record high. It was among the first research universities to produce the drug under the new law. Tufts prides itself on this endeavor, highlighting its sustainable manufacturing process, which only uses coca leaves cultivated by the Department of Biology and leftover reactants from its own chemistry research labs.

Tufts has also been heralded as an innovator for its encouragement of undergraduate involvement in the manufacturing process, something other institutions have been hesitant to do. Tufts offers select work-study positions for eligible students, and recently introduced a for-credit option for STEM majors.

Seeing success in its domestic investments, the federal government sent out an array of new grants funding cocaine manufacturing — the largest of which went to Tufts. Reportedly, Tufts used the grant to completely overhaul and streamline the process. In a genius move attributed to Dr. Ravi Bachu, certain key reactions are now performed in Chem 1 and 2 lab sections, producing a great quantity of a substance necessary for manufacturing. Following these changes, Tufts' cocaine production reached an incredible 150 tons and is projected to increase over the next fiscal year.

Attendees Disappointed After Religion Department Magic Show Turns Out to Be Chemistry Lab

By Sam Braithwaite

A staggering ten of the fifteen members of the Department of Religion E-list jumped at the opportunity to spend time with beloved professors during an evening of spellworking and enchantment. However, according to an anonymous student report, the night took an interesting turn when they were instructed to show up to the Chemistry Building. “As we approached Pearson, some of [the professors] got uncharacteristically anxious,” one student said. The attendees were left in confusion as they crowded around a laboratory door as the department chair Arthur Utz spent the next three hours performing routine experiments. As Utz poured chemicals from the beaker into a jar and gently mixed, the religion professors gasped and gaped. Others reportedly clutched rosaries.

At the end of the show, student attendees were left with mixed feelings. One witness reports that an unnamed religion professor frequently invoked the Inquisition, while others sought to form a conciliatory council. Despite the unusual evening, the consensus remains: the Department of Religion is still a much-beloved part of the Tufts.

Top Sidechat Users Are Good at Masturbating Alone in Dark Room, Study Finds

By Sam Braithwaite

From the outside, the world of Sidechat may appear to be occupied by lonely students seeking out sexual partners and simple friendship, occasionally interrupted by a misinformed commentary on race. However, an in depth study facilitated by the Zamboni discovered that the aforementioned reputation is far more nuanced. According to the study, compared to the rest of the student body, top Sidechat users are really good at masturbating alone in a dark room. The data produced by the Zamboni creates a vivid picture of this reality. When we placed regular “non-sidechat users” alone in a room, 100% of the subjects sat in silence until the completion of the experiment. However, when we placed top Sidechat users in the same experiment, 97% of the subjects immediately turned off the lights, lay on the ground and subsequently masturbated to completion. The other 3% took the time to work on their manifestos. So the next time you look to impose a binary categorization upon Sidechat’s top users, remember, they’re also really good at masturbating alone in a dark room.

Jumboning With Flare: 5 Positions You Have to Try

By Sophie Nguyen

Are you tired of a boring sex life? If you're a CS major, you probably don't even know what I'm talking about, fucking loser. (Please refer to the article: How To Have Sex, Zamboni is here to help).

In any case, we asked sex therapists (Women's, Gender, & Sexuality Studies majors) for solutions to your problems, and they've delivered five easy ways to spice up your love life. So the next time you're getting down – or, for you CS majors, find yourself alone on your B.O.-stained twin XL mattress – give these positions a shot; you might just like what you find. ;)

1. The Butt Muncher

Do you love eating ass but hate tasting shit? If so, the Butt Muncher may be the position for you! This aerodynamic core workout allows you to inspect the hole before you dive in for a goal! All it takes is a simple flip (and perhaps a few baby wipes) and you're face to face with the all-you-can-eat buffet of your dreams. Bon appetit!

2. The Foot Fetish

Think you might have a foot fetish? Give this position a go! Forget toe sucking and bunion grinding; this position allows for a true 360°, 5D foot experience. Simply grab your partner by the feet and swing them around a bit. Not only do you get full hand-to-foot contact – we've also found that the adrenaline rush will give your partner the ride of their life!

3. The Virgin

Why have sex when you can pick up a copy of our latest magazine: X-Rated? Both you and your partner can enjoy a night of light reading, without having to waste money on condoms or birth control.

4. Judy Hopps (from Zootopia)

This is one of our staff picks. There might not be direct contact, but it sure is fun! Who doesn't love some furry roleplay?

5. The Virgin 2.0

To our dear CS majors, please don't feel left out: so here's a position we dedicated just for y'all! We all know you aren't having sex. Why not relax and enjoy a lonely night of X-Rated? With zero chance of physical contact and even less chance of romance, we feel this position is the perfect fit for you!

How to Have Sex

By Noah Lindenbaum

Recently, a good friend of mine came to me with an important inquiry. He was interested in understanding how one might go about having sex. Sadly, I could not provide him with an answer then, but his question got me thinking. How would one do this? That night I lay restless, the question eating at my mind. Thousands upon thousands of possibilities circled in unending torment. No matter how hard I thought, I couldn't seem to find any answers. It just didn't make any sense. After a sleepless night, I was determined to find an answer. About a week's worth of intense study later and I've finally begun to grasp what this whole sex thing is about. To whomever reads this, know I did this for you. You're welcome, no need to thank.

So, the first thing you're gonna need in order to have sex is actually kinda a lot of things actually. One of those things is so incredibly big and mind-bending that it is hard to comprehend, but some of the other things aren't that big so don't worry it's not all terrible. The things ... well let's just say I think you're gonna want to get them. Sooner rather than later because I assume all of you want to have sex sooner rather than later.

Once you have all the things that you need I think you can start to go to the next step which will help you in progressing to eventually having sex. Hm-mmmm ... so the next step is that you're gonna need ... well you're gonna need to do something like apply all the things you just got in the previous step. It will be helpful if you have someone else to do this with, and by that I mean the whole sex thing, but I'm not sure if another person is necessary honestly. Hopefully this person that you might have will help you out when it comes to this step. Also, make sure you're eating well. Not necessarily eating the best possible things (like the healthiest things) if you don't want to but it should definitely be things that are at least somewhat healthy. The sources I read talked a lot about food. Apparently eating well will help you live longer, be happier, and you guessed it, have sex. I tried out eating well and it worked pretty well. I just ate good things and it seemed to work.

Another thing you could try that I read is trying to be around things that you know ... help you have sex. Being around enough of these things should be a big help in the long run on your journey.

Once you apply all the things I talked about it should help you, or make you able to have sex. Don't be discouraged if you fail at first. I have tried to have sex a handful of times and only got it to work a few times I think. I'm pretty sure I got it to work but I'm not one hundred percent certain. Anyways, I may or may not make a part two to this tutorial depending on whether or not I choose to write one so you could either choose to look forward to that or not but you might be disappointed if you do.

How to Please Sunil

By Tyler Frojmovitch

Everyone wants to make our president happy. Whether that be with good grades, joining Tisch Summer Scholars or smoldering, romantic love. If you are ever blessed with a romantic night with Sunil, you have to know what to do. That is why we are covering ... how to please Sunil!

1. He wants you to show him how you like it. Communication is key. Show him, don't tell. Don't be afraid to move his hands, position your body, and use verbal and nonverbal communication to ensure a good time for you both.
2. Sunil worked at Johns Hopkins University! Make sure to tell him how cool he was for that. During coitus, it is important to remind him how John Hopkins University was tied for ninth best university according to U.S. News. This little factoid will make any Blue Jay cream.
3. Whisper pleasantries in his grand usurping of Tony Monaco as President. Men love it when they're compared to others.
4. Remind him about John Hopkins again.
5. BDSMc: Bring Dr. Sunil McDonalds! DoorDash him a McGriddle. Men get super hungry after that kind of workout. If you're hungry, you can order a McFlurry for yourself. Remember though, no solid foods in case there's a round two.

Now, you leave the bedroom ... satisfied.

How to Prevent Jumboning: A Parent's Guide

By Emma Dooley

So, your child has been admitted to Tufts University!

Naturally, you're scared that your child will engage in premarital sex, despite their many years of abstinence. Here are a few steps that YOU (yes, you) can take to make sure your little Jumbo keeps their little jumbo in their pants.

Thankfully, you have already taken the first step: you and your child are reading the Zamboni. The vinyl pages of one of these bad boys fresh off the press are a scientifically-proven sex repellent! So wipe that tear off your cheek, Tufts parent — you're halfway there!

The second step is taking it back to the past and using some methods from the medieval era or my childhood. An occasional text to your child with a reference to Catholic purity warnings could do the trick, for example: "Hey pumpkin, I miss you. Imagine that every time you have premarital sex, a red hand print appears on your future wedding dress. Would you want the world to know how many times you have been defiled before partaking in holy matrimony? Love you." Alternatively, you could try: "I am so sorry you failed your Western Political Thought quiz sweetie pie. Let me remind you that every time you have sex, it is like a petal is being ripped off your flower. A petalless flower is not only ugly, but is also bound to shrivel up and die. XOXO.”

Proposed solutions vision board

And if these don't suit your fancy, you could go back to medieval times with a classic Chastity belt!! I ain't talking new-age leather. I am talking metal, spikes, and locks.

The third step is to petition for some changes to be made to the campus your student will be living on/already is living on. Here are a few examples of changes to petition. Get rid of the disgusting sex vending machine, which allows filth, lust, and intemperance to run wild. Condoms, PlanB, and dental dams all for the hands of the impressionable youth. Also, consider Tufts' rampant exhibitionism: the Jumbo statue outside Barnum has both buttocks and genitals for the world to see. This could be solved with a new pair of big ol' pantaloons to put right on Jumbo's rump. Think of these types of solutions and submit them to the big man upstairs: Sunil Kumar. If you petition (and maybe chain yourself to the doors of the Campus Center) things could change!

Your child's safety — nay, your child's future — is in your hands; it is your choice whether they attend a Purity Ball and invest in a purity ring with their partner. It is your responsibility what your child does in college, so follow these steps and ensure your child stays away from SEX.

As the good Lord said: lead them not into temptation but deliver them from evil.

Funding Your SMFA Degree: Seven Steps to Divorcing an Ivy League Student

By Zachary Arnold

STEP 1: Picking a target

You aren't just looking for any genius, you're looking for a future member of the bourgeoisie. Luckily, there's an easy tell: ask your prospect their thoughts on "The Matrix" (1999), "American Psycho" (2000), or any David Fincher movie (1995-2014). If they critically misunderstand any of these films, they're perfect. You might be asking, "But Zamboni, wouldn't you have to be pretty stupid to miss the obvious messages in these motion pictures?" Well I would ask you this: If our upper class were so smart, why did "Firefly" (2002) only get one season? Alt: "The Critic, Greek, Freaks and Geeks," or "The Muppets" (2015).

STEP 2: Behind every great man ... is you.

Try to be supportive. That might mean showing up for his poetry nights, holding him when he sees his Math 55 grade, or even pretending that Cornell could beat any real hockey team. Try taking him out to leisure activities such as solving Fermat's Last Theorem, comparing business cards, or critiquing the Bush administration. Avoid hard drugs, as they can stunt brain growth in undergrads. As in, don't let him do hard drugs; you can take whatever you want, you won't be needing higher brain function where you're going.

STEP 3: Potential roadblocks

Your future billionaire may attempt to pull a "Social Network" (2010), "Whiplash" (2014), or even a "21" (2008). These are all perfectly normal behaviors for high-achieving students, but may result in him breaking up with you to focus on his career. Instead, try shifting him into a "Legally Blonde" (2001) or a "With Honors" (1994). If you find that your Ivy-League student has pulled a "Soul Man" (1986), return to Step 1.

Co-Founder of Facebook and Harvard Alum, Eduardo Saverin

Tufts Student Not Played by Andrew Garfield, Name Unknown

STEP 4: Legacies? Yes, please!

Divorce can be hard on a child, which might make it hard to decide if you want any at all.

Let's face it: if you could make intelligent decisions, you wouldn't be seeking advice from a Tufts University publication.

That's why we at the Zamboni are here to tell you to go for it. After all, those kids are half-geniuses, and Ivy-League legacies. Compared to the money you'll be raking in, therapy bills will be a mere drop in the bucket! Just make sure your child doesn't wind up dating someone like you.

STEP 5: Cheaters never prosper

Unfortunately, depending on your state of residence, you may have to spend up to twelve years faithful to your husband. That doesn't mean you can't get creative! Try imagining him as Ted Danson, early 2000's "Dracula," or even the Hamburglar. Who knows, if the sex is bad enough you might even get him to cheat on you!

STEP 6: Get the best lawyer money can buy

That his money can buy, at least. You might want to look for one of those sleazier lawyers with low morals. It's easy to tell which lawyers have this desirable feature, because it's all of them.

STEP 7: Girlbossing

Congratulations! You're now officially too rich for your own good. Now it's time to spend that money. Run for president, start a charity for alcoholic grizzly bears, or remake "Gravity" (2013) with entirely practical effects. Hell, with that much money you could even afford to send a kid to Tufts University! Just the one. If you take out a loan.

STEP 8: Reflection (Hidden tip)

It's been 8 years since the divorce. You never really loved your ex-husband, yet you miss him all the same. There was something about that pretentious glint in his eyes and his undiagnosed Asperger's that still burns bright in your memory. The appeal of wealth has long faded. You live in your Hamptons mansion alone now, never able to find another partner. Your days are spent staring off into the ocean as if wishing it would tell you something, give you something. Was it worth it? Are you happy? You don't have the answers, but then again, does anyone?

WALDOS OF TUFTS

By Clara Kolker

You know the type ... you've seen them so often, or perhaps not often enough. They come in different flavors, shapes, sizes, and places on the political — among other kinds of — spectrum. Regardless, one thing remains in the back of your mind: "Where's Waldo?"

Average Tufts Waldo

- Skinny tall white brunette who looks vaguely bisexual (his girlfriend is definitely bisexual) but just likes to listen to the Strokes
- Extra points for mustache
- Extra points for (not religiously, but culturally) Jewish

Pre-O Waldo

- Omg hiiiiiii!
- You guys really SHOULD get lunch sometime! Sorry, you've just been so busy ...

Freshman Hookup Waldo

- He stares at you blankly, but deeply, when you pass him by
- Alternate type: guy who you were sexiled for two years ago

Opp Waldo

- Valid reason or not, you hate them
- Often appears at Late Night or too early at Carm

Party Waldo

- Your social circles have to overlap, right? Because this is the third time you've seen them in a dingy basement, and neither of you want to be there. Bottoms up!

Lone Senior Waldo

- Are they 15? Are they 35? Do they even go here? All you know is they've never made eye contact with, much less spoken to anyone

Thinking About Stealing From the Dining Halls? Think Again: Dining Workers’ Burn Book Tells All

By Sam Braithwaite

One misplaced book in the Dewick-McPhee Dining Hall threatens to unravel the very fabric of Tufts’ community . . . Encased within the faded leather cover of an unassuming diary reveals the vindictive attitude of the Dining Hall workers towards cutlery-thieves, messy eaters, and students with glasses. Taken directly from the pages of the book, certain unsigned passages attribute cruel nicknames to students, reading, “I would shank Musty Meghan if she hadn’t just stolen all of the knives,” and “Sloppy Simon is nasty, does he just spit onto the table?” and “I hate students with glasses. They are the bane of my existence. Can we break their glasses? Nasty Nerds. Vomit.” For now, the trust between students and dining workers remains fragile. We at the Zamboni can only guess at what the future may hold.

Best Places on Campus to Have Sex

By Coltrane Canoll

The map to your right has been annotated for your personal, or perhaps small group, enjoyment. Yes, all these places have been tested thoroughly by Zamboni staff. Yes, we used protection. No, we do not condone any love-making in Goddard Chapel (of course, we can't stop you). With those brief safety warnings aside, please enjoy this unique campus tour!

- 1. The top of Jumbo is our first stop! This will give you the height superiority over other sexually-active couples doing the horizontal tango in Barnum.
- 2. The Gay Steps is the next location. It's close to a parking lot for easy access, you can walk down said steps to Pizza Days to refuel between rounds, and you just know you'll be in some fun positions because of the famous length of these steps.
- 3. Give those freshmen a show!
- 4. Eaton Hall has been on campus this whole time, but you probably don't recognize it because it's been under construction for two years straight. Time to use that to your advantage (finally, you don't have to kick your roommate out).
- 5. This crosswalk may not be the most practical location on campus, but Zamboni be damned if it isn't the most raw. You shouldn't wait to finish crossing the street before letting out your primal urges. If a car hits you, it will just add to the experience! Who knows – maybe it will help him last longer.
- 6. Many may not know this, but there is actually a garden down in the lower campus. I think it's time you and your significant other added your own seed there. Squirt some water on some of those plants. Give that garden some life.
- 7. The gender neutral bathrooms. Always locked for a reason.
- 8. When has your government done anything for you? Maybe it's time you take advantage of the free government facilities on campus. Why else do you pay your taxes? It won't be as empty as Eaton, but, since no one in our generation knows how to send mail, you should be fine. Hopefully they'll use the post box and don't come in to interrupt ...
- 9. Self-explanatory.

BEST PLACES TO SMOKE

By Ella Burdin and Clara Kolker

Because sometimes, Pres Lawn isn't enough when you're on 20mg. Good thing we have some other nifty spots lined up (in no particular order).

10. Miller laundry room: A nostalgia trip to get you started. But beware: freshmen can be kind of scary, and if you make eye contact with them under the influence, they will proceed to steal your soul.

Tufts
UNIVERSITY

11. Tisch gender-neutral bathroom: Liminal. Mysterious. Don't spend too long there, lest you end up trapped in one of the eerie paintings they have on the wall for some reason.

12. Tisch roof: A classic. Everyone has a moment on Tisch roof, yet no one seems to run into each other. Why this is the case, we don't know. If you haven't had your moment yet, now is the time!

13. Cousens Gym: Seeing people take care of themselves will force you to confront your own inadequacies. Why aren't you counting your macros? Are you skipping leg day? Avoid at all costs.

14. The MAB Lab: Zamboni meetings Thursdays at 8! An obvious 10 stars.

TUFTS UNIVERSITY POLICE DEPARTMENT

Official Activity Log
DAILY - Friday, March 8, 2024

OBTAINED BY
ZAC COLAH

5:34 Bush Hall

211110033

TUPD officers were called to the scene of a tripped fire alarm. The cause of the fire alarm was determined to be a burned Pop-Tart in the microwave. The student will face disciplinary action in accordance with Tufts' zero-tolerance policy for early risers.

10:32 Barnum Hall

211110034

TUPD arrived on scene to help a distressed freshman navigate the building. The student was looking for Barnum LLO08 and, despite the name and number, could not comprehend that it was on the bottom floor.

12:08 Intersection of Professors Row and College Ave

211110035

TUPD officers rushed to the scene of a pedestrian who was hit by the Davis Square shuttle. Officials are dumbfounded as to how this was possible because the Tufts Mobile app puts the shuttle in Davis Square at the time of the accident.

13:43 TUPD Office Bathroom

211110036

TUPD officers called to the scene after sobbing was heard in the bathroom stall. Officer Lameson Lee was discovered to be the source.

14:58 Ballou Hall

211110037

TUPD responded to a call about a rowdy protest in front of Ballou Hall. Tufts Climate Action had joined hands with the Revolutionary Marxist Society to protest the Tufts administration's ongoing support of cold weather.

16:27 Gifford House Packard Ave

211110038

TUPD arrived on scene to find Pepper, the TUPD comfort dog, lying motionless on the pavement. Officers determined the cause of death to be a speeding vehicle.

18:41 Dewick MacPhie Dining Hall

211110039

TUPD responded to multiple calls about a brawl in the dining center. Upon breaking up the fight, officers learned that the violence began as students were fighting over the last fork.

20:35 Intersection of Boston Ave and College Ave

211110040

TUPD raced to the scene of a 12-car pile-up at the notoriously problematic intersection. They determined the cause of the accident to be an egotistical student who forgot to look both ways.

23:56 TUPD Garage

211110041

TUPD Officers were dispatched to the residence of Officer Lameson Lee after a medium size dent, multiple clumps of fur, and blood splatter was discovered on Officer Lameson Lee's patrol car.
